

ACTUAL POLICE FORCE IS STRENGTHENED BY THE EVENING WORLD

The Commissioner Adopts Plans to Add to Force of Patrolmen.

SOFT SNAPS ARE GONE.

Civilians Will Do the Easy Jobs for Less Money and Police Do Patrol Work.

The suggestions of The Evening World in relation to police reforms have been found good in the understanding of the new Commissioner in Mulberry street. When The Evening World described the bridge hog and his doings and said he would have to go, Commissioner Bingham promptly called Inspector John Flood before him and gave that efficient official the necessary orders. The bridge hog went and the thanks of thousands of Brooklyn men and women went to his disappearance. It was a triumph for the Commissioner, his able inspector and The Evening World.

The new Commissioner within a few weeks after taking up the reins found his work hampered by the fact that his force of patrolmen—real, live men who were doing police duty—was inadequate in numbers. The three-platoon system—that shuttlecock which former Commissioners have latted in and out—he did not want to tackle. He did not want to institute the old two-platoon, although strongly advised to do so by the higher officers in the department, who regard it as the only system of patrolling that is fair to the people of the city.

Evening World's Suggestions. Again The Evening World made the suggestion that if details were abolished there would be many more men to patrol the streets and protect New York's women from robbery and insult. It printed an article showing where these men—the favored sons of blue—could be found. The paper ferreted them out from the court squads and telephone exchange, the offices at Headquarters and various city departments. The Evening World on Feb. 3 said:

The new Police Commissioner may find where 310 of New York's paid protectors are doing work entirely apart from police duty. There are men who, excepting perhaps the court squad, never make an arrest and never carry a baton. They are men who avoid the authority vested in them, and who run away from trouble when they find it on the street. These men—when they are done with their clerical work—hurry home as a bookkeeper in an insurance or a drygoods store does. If there is a row on the street car they step off or keep a close mouth.

The Evening World on that same date printed a table showing how 310 of these details were "held down" by policemen drawing annual salaries of $1,300, amounting to $446,000. It showed that by substituting civilians at $800 a year and putting the policemen out on patrol there would be a saving of $600 a year to the city in the cost of each employee.

Bingham Could See It.

Commissioner Bingham, who has not assumed the aspect of the wise man who knows it all, showed again that he knows a good thing when he sees it. He decided that clerical work, telephone and telegraph work and the like did not have to be done by policemen. Said the Commissioner: "Let us put these policemen out on the streets to do police work and hire civilians to take care of these snap jobs. It won't require so many men, and the work will be done much better."

Needs Men to Help.

He said in making his demands: "That building up there in Mulberry street," he said to the committee, "is loaded up with men who ought to be on patrol. I have found many men attached to the deputies' offices who can easily be dispensed with. I want to account for every cent that goes out of that office, and I want an executive clerk to dig around and find out about it. He will cost $2,100 a year.

I want him to go through all the accounts with a fine comb and see where the leaks, if any, are. We have got to economize.

"Take the telegraph and telephone service. There are forty men there costing the city $70,000 a year. I understand that I can have the same work done for $20,000.

"There are $5,000 worth of bluecoats working in the office of Chief Clerk Kipp alone who ought to be in uniform and on the streets. There are $150,000 worth of the same material enjoying soft snaps in the courts, and Magistrate Wade informs me that $90,000 ought to be enough.

His arguments went out and he will get the money.

This was on Monday, and after returning to Mulberry street he issued an order abolishing the signal system.

which does away with the telephone man in each station whose police duty has heretofore consisted in keeping a record of these calls from men on post.

The Telephone System.

On this subject The Evening World of Feb. 3 said:

In the police stations there are patrolmen who answer the telephone and register the fact that the man on post is doing his work. This is a roundabout way of doing it. It is a roundabout way of doing it. It is a roundabout way of doing it.

A useless system. The Commissioner took the bull by the horns and abolished the whole system. The argument him hard. Commissioner Bingham's splendid work, which is perhaps the greatest blow the system ever received, is

CLYDE LINE NOT YET BOUGHT BY MORSE

He Intimates that Big Steamship Deal May Be Announced To-Morrow.

It is expected that Charles W. Morse will announce to the public his purchase by himself and associates of the Clyde Steamship line. Seen at the Garfield National Bank in West Twenty-third street to-day, Mr. Morse said when asked about the deal:

"There is nothing definite that I can say to-day. See me at my office to-morrow."

William P. Clyde, president of the Clyde Steamship Company, was at his home, No. 1 West Fifth street, to-day.

"None of the lines of the Clyde Steamship Company has been sold," he said. "Offers have been made. But none of these I cannot say. I will not discuss the matter."

It is known that a certificate of incorporation for $14,000,000 has been filed with the Registrar of Leeds John A. Fisher, at Bath, Me., by the attorneys for Mr. Morse. This certificate is said to cover the purchase of the Clyde line, which will be added to the list of steamship companies which Mr. Morse and his associates now control.

The Clyde Steamship Company owns twenty steamships with a total tonnage of $3,000. They are the Algonquin, Apache, Arapahoe, Benefactor, Carib, Clippewa, Comanche, George W. Clyde, Goldboro, Huron, Ironhorse, Mohican, Navaho, New York, Onondaga, Onondaga, Seminole, Winnebago and Yosemite. The business is divided into several trade names, lines and services, including the Clyde line, which is the principal line of the company.

The Clyde Steamship Company, which is controlled by William P. Clyde & Co., is a New York corporation. The company's headquarters are at 15 Broadway, New York. The company's ships are operated by the Clyde Steamship Company, which is controlled by William P. Clyde & Co.

SENATE IN LINE TO SHIELD KILBURN

Passes in Silence Resolution to Ask Higgins for Points to Aid Bank Inquiry.

(Special to The Evening World.) ALBANY, Feb. 7.—(The Senate to-day joined in the movement of the banks and trust companies and friends of Superintendent of Banks Kilburn to cut off as long as possible an investigation of his department. The Finance Committee reported a resolution calling on Gov. Higgins to hand over to the committee whatever information he has on the subject of Kilburn's official conduct.

Chairman Malby, of the committee, made no explanation and the Senate without debate or comment of any sort adopted the resolution unanimously.

PLANS FOR MORE FREE CITY FERRIES

Sinking Fund Commission Authorizes Negotiations with Owners of the Lines.

Besides practically deciding upon purchasing the Thirty-ninth street ferry, running from the foot of Whitehall street, and operating it by the city, the Sinking Fund Commissioners to-day made another move toward reducing the crush at the Brooklyn Bridge and wipe out the Bridge Hog nuisance.

The scheme, which is not a new one, was suggested by Comptroller Metz, who wants to make arrangements with the ferry companies to carry passengers free during the rush hours morning and evening.

When Mr. Grout was Comptroller he tried to make a similar arrangement with the ferry companies, but the scheme fell through.

"The reason the people do not use the ferries," said Mr. Metz, "is because they have to pay an additional fare. Now, if we can get them free transportation—the city of course offering a reasonable compensation—and if we can get the trolley cars to run to the ferry I believe that much of the crush, the inconvenience and the bridge-hog nuisance will be ended."

The other members of the Sinking Fund Commission thought the scheme a good one, and the matter was referred to the Comptroller and Borough President McGowan to take action.

It was at the request of Dock Commissioner Bennett that action was taken over the Thirty-ninth street ferry plan. He asked for power to go ahead and engage architects and engineers to prepare plans for terminals and also for three boats. He was told to go ahead.

The same program was observed in the case of the State Island ferry. The Board of Finance and the Board of Aldermen have no power to interfere now, there is not anything to stay progress.

Already the city owns the Whitehall street terminal and the South Brooklyn ferry, and the matter was referred to the Comptroller and Borough President McGowan to take action.

professional experience in furnishing a preparation that they can conscientiously recommend.

One can readily see that the experience of such an organization is of unlimited strength and far-reaching in the relief of suffering humanity.

The first remedy that held the attention of this collection of professional men was FRUIT LAX. This is a never-failing relief for constipation. It is made from nature's true laxatives. The ingredients combine the curative properties of nature's plants, so carefully blended that the confection is delicious and the effect decidedly pleasing and most effective.

Anyone who has suffered from the result of the "cure all" invariably brings. Nothing takes the place of FRUIT LAX but fresh air and plenty of exercise. There is no medicinal substitute for this satisfactory remedy.

The price is 25 cents a box. One box will establish its popularity. All druggists should and will sell A. D. S. FRUIT LAX, but if your druggist cannot supply you to-day write inclosing price and it will be sent prepaid. ADDRESS: AMERICAN DRUGGISTS' SYNDICATE, 1 Madison Avenue, New York.

One thousand brainy druggists, men high in their profession, who have long looked with indignation upon the many schemes of the unprincipled men to rob people of their health and money and at the same time make of the druggist a cheap vendor of worthless nostrums, have completed an organization of such scientific strength as will exert a powerful influence for good over the entire country. These druggists are located all over the United States, and there are two hundred in New York alone.

The Association is known as the American Druggists' Syndicate and in the preparation of prescriptions with the place of the worthless mixture that has flooded the country, the combined pharmaceutical knowledge of this entire body is available. The advice of this Association to those who do not know the nature of their ailment is: "See a physician." But to those who do, they offer their

TOO OLD TO FIND WORK THIS MAN KILLED HIMSELF

William McAvoy Tried Hard, but Failed Because He Was 66.

William McAvoy, falling in the advancing years to secure work to keep himself and his young wife, committed suicide, by drinking carbolide acid, in his home, No. 102 Greene street, Jersey City, to-day.

He left a farewell note saying: "Nothing more to say. Will see you and Annie in heaven. Good-by. M."

The "Annie" referred to is a child that died.

At first it was reported that his wife and he had separated. This she denies. They lived at No. 313 Second avenue up to ten days ago, and she lives there yet. She is almost crazy with grief.

She kissed a little gold locket with an inch-long dangle tied to it by a piece of pink hair ribbon, and sobbed. The locket contains a picture of the little girl that came to them a year ago, and who died six weeks ago.

William McAvoy had two sons and three daughters, all settled in life and well-to-do. Up to six months ago he lived in a good house, and their home was all that he and his young wife could desire.

They were happy, and when their little one came they seemed to need nothing more in life; but then the old man lost his job. It seemed hard for him to find another. They got along for awhile, but the little one needed things that cost money, and the mother had to go to work.

Even then they could not make both ends meet and their things went one at a time, until six months ago they were so poor that they had to move into smaller quarters. They got rooms from Mrs. Callahan, a friend of long standing, but poor like themselves, and moved to her house, No. 1133 Second avenue. The young wife and mother had a place which she has yet in a Sixth avenue store. When the baby died it took all that Mrs. McAvoy had for the burial.

She tried to get along and worked harder, but still she could not pay the debts and support her old husband.

He got a job the other day as an engineer and tried to keep it. He worked early and late, but he was too old, and was discharged. He came home and told his young wife all, and then he went down to the corner store and had something to put a little heart into him.

He Worried His Wife.

Then he went all to pieces and could do nothing but follow his young wife around, and it made her uncomfortable in her position, as he showed up at the store where she worked, and it was annoying.

She had a heart-to-heart talk with her friend, Mrs. Callahan, and they decided that the old man might pull himself together if he were thrown entirely on his own resources, so when he came home that night Mrs. Callahan told him his wife was gone. She told him that he must find a room elsewhere, and he went away. Night after night he wrote a letter from him, sent from his Jersey City address, asking for the address of his wife, but she would not answer him.

They did not intend keeping the old man in ignorance of his wife's whereabouts, but she was too deep in grief to think about him alone in the Jersey City lodging-house, and so they did not write to him.

The next news was of his suicide, and the blow has prostrated the young woman, so that she is very ill.

The shipping clerks of Brill Brothers' Union Square Store are going across Broadway to-night to Keith's Theatre to rope and tie the Houdini, "the Handcuff King" and nail him up, bound hand and foot, in a stout dry-goods packing case.
